New textbook of medical Czech

Karolinum Publishing House publishes the textbook Talking Medicine 2: Case Studies in Czech by Iveta Čermáková from the Department of Languages and Tereza Bakusová from the Department of Nursing. This textbook is a sequel to Talking Medicine: Czech for Medical Students. It is intended for foreign medical students who study at Czech medical faculties and need to communicate with patients and medical staff in Czech hospital settings and work with essential medical documentation. The textbook is built around a series of case studies from various specialized fields.

It is hoped that this textbook will, in a structured and systematic way, give students a better understanding of history-taking techniques and concepts as well as introduce new terminology, which culminates in more efficient and effective hospital interactions and communication.
