About us

Founded in 1992 and based in Oxford, the Europaeum is a network of 17 leading universities across Europe.

Our mission is to give the most talented, energetic and socially committed graduate students within our network the opportunities to develop professional qualities to shape the future of Europe for the better.

Master's and PhD students, as well as academic staff in our network can participate in a programme of bespoke and unique activities and events throughout the year. In addition, PhD students in the network can apply to our two-year flagship Scholars' programme.

Our unique programmes and events are designed and aim to enable graduate students to think, learn and develop skills together across disciplines, cultures and countries.

We believe that our students' discussions of Europe's past, present and future will help empower them to address new global challenges and offer leadership for tomorrow. Our latest annual report is available here.

What our students say

"...an intellectually stimulating and enriching experience. The organizers brought together some of the most distinguished senior scholars in the field, who shared their ideas about the interconnectedness of both the prehistoric and the ancient world."

"Vibrant rewarding discussions ... among scholars and students from different countries and from a wide range of disciplines in line with the mission of the Europaeum. What a privilege to take part in such an event!"
